

Writing for Publication: guiding tips

In this talk, I will present important best practices to guide you when writing for publication, keeping your audience, mainly journal reviewers, in mind. The talk will be organized to reflect the process of science writing, starting with the overall article structure, and then delving into the different sections in the order in which they are normally written. We will review tips and concepts to keep in mind when writing the Methods, Results, Introduction, Discussion/Conclusions, and your Title and Abstract. In addition, to aid you in the process, some tools will also be presented.
